Use with single unit container_

The CRO Damage Control Resuscitation (DCR) 7L is designed to optimize the delivery of the first unit of blood at the point of injury (POI) before entering into a massive transfusion protocol. This slim bag is designed to carry diagnostics, access, and a single unit container, as well as POI drugs in a tiered load-out. The first-line MARCH belt is recommended for use with this product. This product does not come stocked.

The DCR 7L has flat straps for when it's time to get on the move, and quick-release buckles to easily drop the panel for urgent patients. It provides the wearer with a virtually unnoticed med bag that shifts weight directly through the back plates.

Tegris®
$380.00

Primary POI aid bag for multi-mission use.

1.5L Hydration compartment reservoir_ Large internal workstation_ TEGRIS reinforcement prevents crush_ Customizable bungee panel_

The DCR 9 Liter is an iterative approach to load carriage for the point of injury medic. Increased capacity over the DCR 7L, which is primarily fixed to the plate carrier and offsets primary load carriage to a MARCH belt setup. The DCR 9L gives more options for full medical load out of a primary aid bag without the need to supplement with a MARCH belt.

The design is based on a SAPI plate and eliminates the extra length seen with other aid bags, aiding in the ability to carry items on the back of a gun belt. The rounded top kills dead space when rounding corners and Velcro hook keeps the bag firm and fixed to the plate carrier for stability.

Flat straps optimize storage in vehicles or helicopters, reducing snag hazards from loose straps. The exterior is designed to accept two tear away CRO Blood Transport Containers, moving blood storage to the exterior of the bag, and allowing resuscitation equipment to be stored inside.

The custom bungee retention panels provide retention and customization of equipment. We removed the interior pouches to reduce weight, allowing full visualization of the workstation, and eliminating the need to go into smaller interior pockets.

Designed for 2U SOP_
Chassis opening
(total game changer)_
Tapered base reduces offset_

We designed the 26L to meet the 2 Unit LTOWB SOP for internal storage. After surveying the community, most medics with a 2U SOP were opting for some type of 30L ruck to carry blood internally, while still having enough room for resuscitative equipment. By creating space efficiencies with a purpose-built product for medics delivering Damage Control Resuscitation, we were able to reduce the overall footprint compared to commercial off-the-shelf 30L rucks. The DCR-26L is remarkably low profile for the size. A true assault bag and a new industry standard.

Using our patented tightening system, the Pelvic Binder will easily reduce and stabilize open-book pelvic fractures. It packs flat and reduces overall bulk for first-line aid bag or MARCH belt carry.

The Pelvic Binder is a registered device with the US FDA and can only be sold to US customers.

The CoTCCC update, released on 31JAN2017 indicates pelvic binding under "Circulation" for bleeding control, due to common high-energy battlefield MOIs associated with significant morbidity and mortality due to associated vascular injuries. 26% of service members that died in OEF/OIF died with a pelvic fracture.
